ferrying military personnel and other government officials into Haiti. On this flight, American evacuated 179 people. Evacuees transported out of Haiti are determined by the U.S. State Department.

American Eagle continues to fly ATR-72 aircraft with relief supplies to Haiti from its San Juan, Puerto Rico, hub. During the first week following the earthquake, a total of eight American Eagle flights arrived in Port-au-Price providing 80,000 pounds of aid.

“Our hearts go out to our friends, family, co-workers and all people affected by this catastrophic earthquake,” said Peter Dolara, American’s Senior Vice President – Mexico, the Caribbean and Latin America. “It is extremely gratifying to see how our employees and customers have come together to help provide much-needed assistance to the people of Haiti. We will continue to do whatever we can to help.”

Employees from both American and Eagle have already set in motion additional efforts to aid earthquake victims by raising funds and providing assistance in many different ways, including:

- In just a week, American’s 16 Employee Resource Groups, which reflect a wide range of communities within American’s diverse employee population, raised more than $8,500 through a variety of activities.
- American and American Eagle employees at New York’s John F. Kennedy Airport held bake sales, a Caribbean food sale, and other fundraising activities and raised $20,000.
- All money raised in January through American’s “Champions for Children” program will be donated to Haiti relief efforts. Flight Attendants and Admirals Club employees who participate in the Champions for Children program ask customers to donate their unused foreign or domestic currency. Donations can be made on select American flights or in the airline’s Admirals Clubs and Flagship Lounges worldwide. The Champions for Children volunteers support the UNICEF Change for Good® program at AA, a program that has raised more $60 million worldwide since its inception.
- More than 350 American and American Eagle employees will help staff phones at American’s Southern Reservations Office during the star-studded “Relief for Haiti Now” telethon scheduled for tonight. Celebrities such as George Clooney, Wyclef Jean, Anderson Cooper and Bono will appear on the telethon, which will raise money for Haiti relief efforts.
